ASHVILLE DRAWS THROG TO ITS HOLIDAY EVENT

Fireworks Tonight To End Village's Annual Fourth Of July Frolic

While Circleville was enjoying its most quiet Fourth of July in some years—partially because of the ban on fireworks and partially because of lack of organized activity—Ashville was "going to town" in a big way, with hundreds on hundreds of persons pouring into the village to enjoy another Independence Day celebration.

Perfect weather was prevailing for Ashville's celebration, and numerous activities, including a parade, ball game, carnival features and fireworks, were provided to entertain the visitors. The village proved to be a candidate's paradise, every nominee for office in the county and district getting in some looks in behalf of his candidacy.

The fireworks display was scheduled for Thursday evening as a fitting climax to the celebration. Many motorists took to the roads early in the morning, excellent temperatures making motor travel enjoyable. The mercury refused to move above the 60-degree mark early in the day, but a bright sun was helping to make the day more comfortable.

Nearly 1,000 Italian And Nazi Prisoners Drown As Sub Sinks British Liner

LONDON, July 4 — Loss of as many as 1,200 or more lives was feared today following announcement that the British passenger liner Arandora Star, serving as a prison ship, had been torpedoed in one of history's greatest maritime tragedies.

The ship was hit and sunk off Ireland's west coast while en route to Canada with interned Germans and Italians.

It was estimated that some 968 of the 1,500 internees were drowned as they fought savagely and struggled wildly to free themselves from the barred holds of the liner. Many of the 500 British officers, sailors and soldiers aboard the ship also perished.

Less than 800 of the 2,000 persons aboard the vessel were known to have been rescued after the 15,474-ton vessel was torpedoed, allegedly without warning.

One surviving British soldier said that hundreds of the Germans and Italians, some of whom snatched firearms from their British guards, rushed to the docks as soon as the torpedo struck. There they were disarmed by the British soldiers and sailors.

But, this informant said, the Germans and Italians battled each other fiercely, seeking to reach the lifeboats first.

U. S. CITIZENS IN FAR EAST SEEK EVACUATION AID

WASHINGTON, July 4—Americans in the Far East, particularly in Japanese-beleaguered Hong Kong, are sending frantic appeals to the State Department to arrange for their evacuation or protection, it was learned today.

So far as the department is aware they are in no immediate danger, although there have been reports of a prospective food shortage at Hong Kong. Japanese have severed its supply lines to the mainland. The American liner President Coolidge several days ago evacuated a number of U. S. citizens from this British citadel in the Far East. It is not known exactly how many remain there.

Pending receipt of further information on conditions in Hong Kong, officials were unable to predict whether any emergency measures would be necessary.

Meanwhile, observers believed that the Japanese, intent on taking advantage of France's defeat and Great Britain's critical position in Europe to enlarge their empire at the expense of these powers, are trying to learn, through oblique political measures, whether the United States will attempt to stop them. During the last week the oriental sky has been filled with "trial balloons" sent up to draw American fire.

Major Action Centers About Oran, Algeria, Where Several Captains Refuse To Accept Ultimatum

By H. R. Knickerbocker

LONDON, July 4—America's greatest vital interest in the defeat of France was answered today after the British navy in a series of actions at Mediterranean ports sank, put out of action or seized important units of the French fleet which attempted to return to France and surrender to the Germans.

Sea power in the Atlantic, which would have been imperilled by surrender of the French fleet to Germany, may as a result of this resolute action by the British remain in their hands.

The principal action centered around Oran, Algeria, where two major units and a score of minor units of the French fleet were concentrated.

The British learned of the intention of the French commanders to take the vessels back to France and give them up to the Germans yesterday afternoon.

British authorities, after having exhausted every means of persuasion, gave the French captains an ultimatum to surrender by 3 p. m.

Instead of complying, the French weighed anchor and tried to sail out of the harbor and from three o'clock on the two fleets engaged in battle.

Ships Burning, Chased
Reports are coming to London slowly, mostly by airplane, so the details are uncertain, but it is believed that the two major units of the French battle fleet were engaged, that one was hit so severely that she was burning and that the other is now being pursued.

Several score other smaller French naval vessels were involved and most of them were reported either to have sunk or surrendered.

The results of this action are far-reaching. It means that the British finally have shown that they know the seriousness of the war and intend no longer to risk losing it through kid-glove tactics.

It was considered a matter of life or death for the British to prevent the French navy from falling into German hands.

But the Germans, according to the British, knew that too. And I can testify from talks with several French naval officers now in Britain that the Germans have used every conceivable means to persuade French naval officers to capitulate.

First, the officers said, the Germans informed the French admiralty that if the French navy did not surrender, every female member of the families of French naval officers and crews would be interned in concentration camps.

Secondly, the "calculated" behavior of German troops occupying France has had its desired effect.

Senate To Tangle With Issue Monday; Seven Years To Be Used

WASHINGTON, July 4 — Congressional leaders today expected the naval expansion bill authorizing the mightiest fleet in the world will receive quick approval after it reaches the senate on Monday.

The bill, already approved by house and senate naval affairs committees, authorizes a 70 percent increase in naval tonnage and a fleet of 15,000 or more fighting airplanes.

Experts pointed out, however, that the expansion program probably will require from five to seven years to complete.

The senate committee changed the bill to allow construction of patrol and minor auxiliary vessels "as may be necessary," instead of limiting the authorization to $25,000,000 as in the house-approved measure.

The committee also boosted from $20,000,000 to $35,000,000 the authorization for construction of additional facilities for manufacture of armor plating. The senate group made provision for the Navy Department to permit the

BERLIN REPORTS ADOLF ALLOWED SHIP SCUTTLING

BERLIN, July 4—As a direct result of the Anglo-French naval battle in the Mediterranean off Oran, Algeria, Chancellor Hitler today granted permission to France to scuttle her own ships to prevent them from falling into the hands of the British, according to an official announcement.

Under terms of the Franco-German-Italian armistice agreement, the French Government had undertaken to surrender its warships to the victors with the understanding they would not be used against Great Britain.

Today's action by Hitler thus marks a drastic alteration of the agreement regarding disposition of the French fleet.

German authorities also announced that outcome of the Oran Anglo-French naval battle is unknown.

French units in British harbors were ordered to sail to the French port of Brest, if necessary by force of arms.

Circleville's observance of the event was entirely informal. Flags were in evidence everywhere, all official and industrial activities were suspended. The regular holiday schedule was in effect at the postoffice, courthouse and city hall.

Theatres were staging continuous shows; restaurants were doing rushing business.

While Ashville was drawing many persons, other centers of interest were busy. The Pickaway Country Club golf course was filled early in the day, with the winner of a handicap tournament to receive the Cryder Mashie for the next year.

Gold Cliff Park was attracting its portion of the holiday crowd with picnic and bathing parties arranged. The air was rather cool for bathing, but the water was reported to be much warmer than the outside air.

Family reunions and dinners were in evidence everywhere, and many of the county's men of the soil refused to observe a holiday, but decided to catch up with some belated farm work.

F. D. R., AT HOME FOR SHORT REST, REMAINS SILENT

HYDE PARK, N. Y., July 4 — President Roosevelt momentarily turned his back on an ever-increasing demand that he declare himself a third term candidate to return to Hyde Park today for a Fourth of July celebration of his own arranging.

In Washington the White House mail room was swamped under a deluge of appeals that he agree to break all precedent and head up the Democratic ticket for a third term.

Between the nomination at Philadelphia of Wendell Willkie as the Republican presidential candidate and Mr. Roosevelt's departure for Hyde Park last night over 5,000 letters had poured in from every section of the country pleading that he run again.

To these appeals — and other more strenuous ones from ranking leaders in the Democratic party — there was still no answer. New Dealers were making sizeable bets that the President would accept. They were gambling on his determination to carry through with the multi-billion-dollar defense program against any possible economic or military encroachments by German Chancellor Hitler and his axis Allies.

fect, according to the French officers. During this period before the "conquest of Britain," German troops in France have been ordered to conduct themselves in exemplary fashion.

French naval crews and officers in British ports, therefore, heard that the Germans in Paris were being very friendly and were paying for whatever they requisitioned.

Moreover, German authorities were said to have raised the wages of Paris workmen 20 percent. This also had the desired effect and one French naval officer told me:

"Eighty percent of our men want to return to France."

The background of the attitude of the French navy is this: On the day after Admiral Jean Darlan became a member of the Bordeaux Government, he sent the commanding officers of all French Warships an extremely secret code message, about as follows:

"This is my last order. Hereafter disregard all orders, even if signed by me, because I am no longer free. This last order to you is that you shall not surrender your ship."

He signed this message "Darlan" instead of the usual signature, "admiralty."

This attempt, however, to prevent the fleet from falling into the hands of the enemy was frustrated by a foresighted move by Premier Henri Philippe Petain.

Immediately after Darlan's message was sent, Petain replaced all commanding officers whom he suspected of being unwilling to capitulate. The result was yesterday's naval battle.

Its consequences are invaluable. Among them is the possibility, even the probability, that Chancellor Hitler may use the battle to bring France into war with Britain and that within a few days.

LONDON, July 4—Considerable German air activity was reported in progress over southern and western England shortly before noon today.

The renewed German aerial forays evidently were a continuation of yesterday's daring daylight attacks which killed six Britons and wounded 78.

Officials announced that six German bombers had been brought down during yesterday's Nazi assaults.

Still more German planes raided Britain during the night, dropping bombs along the southeast coast. It was understood several casualties were caused. British pursuit planes chased the raider to sea.

Early this morning it was revealed that a train travelling between two south coast towns had been bombed by a German plane.

The engineer was injured, but only four passengers, two women and two children, were aboard the train. They escaped without injuries, crouching on the coach floor as the bombs fell. The toe of one woman's shoe was torn off and car windows were smashed as the bombs fell.

PAIR OF KASEY STARS WATCHED

KANSAS CITY, July 4—The New York Yankees plan to do a little building next year — with Gerry Priddy and Phil Rizzuto, prize second base combination for the Kansas City Blues, in on the ground floor.

It took just one exhibition game, witnessed from the stands by Joe McCarthy and Yankee and Blue front office officials to drive that point home.

No matter that the powerful Yanks drubbed the cousins 7 to 4, the performance of Rizzuto at short and Priddy at second base convinced the strategists that they were witnessing the greatest infield combination in the game today. Their remarks were reiteration of statements by Tris Speaker and others who have witnessed the youngsters in play, to wit: The majors haven't seen anything like them for years.

Both players are adept at the plate, batting well above .300 out of their caving on the inner defense line is what brings the gleam to the eye of any baseball fan. The two have pulled their tricks around second base for the last four years and they work as one.

Their idea of an out is a double play and they work on the batter as if every ball smacked in their direction is a double play possibility. They led the American Association in double plays last season and are ahead of the pack in the same department this season.

Like true automatons of the game Priddy and Rizzuto waste no movement in looking or figuring at which spot the other will be; each knows the ground the other covers, and when Priddy pegs one down to Rizzuto, or vice versa, that man is ready to receive the ball.

According to advices from the front office, the shift in the Yankee lineup next spring will be Gordon to third with Rizzuto at short and Priddy on second. Another possibility, Gordon to first with Rolfe on the far corner sack has been broached. But whatever the shift, it seems certain at this writing that the present Blues second base combination will perform at their regular positions and that Crossett will be out.

It is a strange quirk of fate that has Rizzuto replacing Crossett. The present Yankee shortstop, is, and always has been, the idol of Phil Rizzuto.

Refusal To Believe Nazi Promises Speeds Move Against French Fleet

LONDON, July 4 — Britain's navy struck swiftly to prevent a substantial portion of the French naval fleet from falling into German hands, the British Ministry of Information revealed today.

The British coup was hailed in London as a guarantee that the European naval balance of power would not swing over to Germany and Italy.

Describing the naval battle and seizures of French war vessels, the Ministry of Information announcement said:

"It will be recalled that the French Government, relying on the promises of Italy and Germany not to use her fleet against France's former ally, undertook by the terms of the armistice to allow their fleet to pass into the hands of the enemy.

"His Majesty's Government, having lost all faith in promises made by the governments of Germany and Italy, felt that it was compelled not only in its own interests, but also in the hope of restoring the independence of France and the integrity of the French empire, to take steps before it was too late to insure that the French fleet should not be used against Britain by the common enemy.

"With this object in view, steps were taken in the early morning of July 3 to place all French men-of-war in British ports under British control. This operation was successfully carried out with only two casualties, which occurred owing to a misunderstanding.

"At the same time French vessels in ports of North Africa were offered certain conditions designed solely for the purpose of keeping them out of German hands.

"It was explained to the officer in command that if none of these conditions was accepted, Great Britain was prepared to take every step in order to insure that none of these vessels should be used against her for future prosecution of the war.

"His Majesty's Government deeply regrets that the French admiral in command at Oran refused to accept any of the conditions proposed, with the inevitable result that action had to be taken against the French vessels in that locality. These operations are still proceeding.

"A statement will be made to Parliament later today by the prime minister."

matched with Louis, he could conceivably build up his punching power. The weakness of that punching power was ably demonstrated in the 15th round of his last fight against Gus Lesnevich in Detroit.

Lesnevich was tiring fast. Conn drove him to the ropes and peppered him with lefts and rights. But he couldn't smack Lesnevich to the canvas for the kill, although Gus went down once but not for a count.

A fighter with a killing punch, under circumstances as they were, would have had Lesnevich flat on his back in the land of whatever dreams a kayode puglist finds himself.

But Conn has a lot of time to develop himself. He's only 23 years old now. If, within the next two years, his punching skill becomes commensurate with his boxing trickery, he might well become the "White Hope" for which fans the countrywide have long been searching.

MAN ON DONKEY IS GUARD FOR ENGLISH ISLE

BECHOU, Channel Isles—Seated on a donkey, 70-year-old John Francis Perio daily patrols this small island to guard the twelve in habitants against German invaders.

John has promoted himself to be the island's defense force. To add dignity to his position he has devised a uniform consisting of tattered kilt, sporran, tunic, forage cap, rifle and knee boots.

Throughout the day John patrols the shore of the island on Clarabelle, his fat, sedate donkey of uncertain age. Constantly he places his hand over his eyes and scans the skies.

"I'm not having German planes flying over here," he said as he gently patted his rifle. "Just let the Germans try. I'll fix them."

GERMANY "SPY" SHIPS PHILADELPHIA — German ships which visited Philadelphia in the past were able to observe weaknesses of our coast defenses, according to former Mayor J. Hampton Moore of Philadelphia. "This is a very good time to realize," said Moore, "that we are very inadequately defended along the Atlantic seaboard. The younger generation is unaware, I imagine, that American ships were sunk outside the Delaware River in the World War."

DETROIT WANTS LOUIS AND CONN

Autumn Heavyweight Title Bout May Be Booked In Motor City

DETROIT, July 4—Detroit fans are whooping it up for an autumn heavyweight bout between Billy Conn, light heavyweight titlist who said he won't defend his crown again, and Joe Louis, the "Brown Bomber" who went forth from Detroit to snare the world's heavyweight diadem.

But while they would like to see Conn meet the poker faced Louis, they doubt that the smiling Irishman from Pittsburgh would have much show. Because Conn, unless he gets more wallop in his sharpshooting left, couldn't hurt Louis under any circumstance.

Conn, first and last is a boxer. He likes to dance around his opponents, confusing them, occasionally flipping that left out so fast it seems to have been fired from a cannon.

His trick is to play a waiting game, letting the other fellow take the first aggressive steps. When the aggressor tires or slows down, the Conn shifts his tactics, comes in close for body punches which, combined with left hooks, pile up enough points for the decision.

Detroit fans, who have seen both Conn and Louis in action, feel that if Conn was matched for a 15-round bout with the champion he would fall victim to one of Louis' lethal blows long before the maximum limit.

But on the other hand, they admit that if Conn could stay the limit he might accumulate the points necessary for victory. And they admit, also, that between now and the time Conn might be between the explosion of the torpedo and the ship's plunge to the bottom.

Many of the internees were believed to have been killed in the fighting that occurred as Germans and Italians battled each other for lifeboat space, the survivors said. Others, trapped in the holds, drowned without chance of escape.

Authorities said no women or children were among the interned passengers of the Arandora Star.

A British admiralty announcement said the dead numbered "several hundred." Naval coast guard vessels and Canadian rescue ships brought the survivors ashore.

Many of the British officers, sailors and soldiers, including the ship's master, perished in the ship's dive to the bottom, but the Italian internees were said to have formed the majority of the victims.

No Warning Given

The survivors charged the Arandora Star was torpedoed without warning in the darkness, affording no opportunity to lower enough lifeboats to avoid the huge loss of life.

Panic among the internees, they said, also handicapped efforts to get life boats into the water. One of the internees was praised, however, for calming the others and thereby saving many lives.

(The German high command, which announced the sinking of the Arandora Star yesterday, described the ship as an "armed English steamer.")

The admiralty statement announced tersely:

"Several hundred Italian and German internees and also members of the crew and an escort of soldiers were drowned."

WASHINGTON, July 4—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, in what was believed to be an unprecedented message of rebuke to a labor union, moved early today to prevent a strike that threatens to tie up west coast shipping.

The secretary shortly before midnight, fighting a strike deadline, telegraphed the Marine Cooks and Stewards Association of the Pacific, virtually commanding the union not to strike against the American Shipowners Association.

The agreement was reached shortly after midnight, at which hour 5,000 seagoing culinary workers were to have quit their posts, automatically throwing into idleness 20,000 workers and 175 intercoastal and offshore vessels in the Pacific.

flect, according to the French officers. During this period before the "conquest of Britain," German troops in France have been ordered to conduct themselves in exemplary fashion.

French naval crews and officers in British ports, therefore, heard that the Germans in Paris were being very friendly and were paying for whatever they requisitioned.

Moreover, German authorities were said to have raised the wages of Paris workmen 20 percent. This also had the desired effect and one French naval officer told me:

"Eighty percent of our men want to return to France."

The background of the attitude of the French navy is this: On the day after Admiral Jean Darlan became a member of the Bordeaux Government, he sent the commanding officers of all French Warships an extremely secret code message, about as follows:

"This is my last order. Hereafter disregard all orders, even if signed by me, because I am no longer free. This last order to you is that you shall not surrender your ship."

He signed this message "Darlan" instead of the usual signature, "admiralty."

This attempt, however, to prevent the fleet from falling into the hands of the enemy was frustrated by a foresighted move by Premier Henri Philippe Petain.

Immediately after Darlan's message was sent, Petain replaced all commanding officers whom he suspected of being unwilling to capitulate. The result was yesterday's naval battle.

Its consequences are invaluable. Among them is the possibility, even the probability, that Chancellor Hitler may use the battle to bring France into war with Britain and that within a few days.

LONDON, July 4—Considerable German air activity was reported in progress over southern and western England shortly before noon today.

The renewed German aerial forays evidently were a continuation of yesterday's daring daylight attacks which killed six Britons and wounded 78.

Officials announced that six German bombers had been brought down during yesterday's Nazi assaults.

Still more German planes raided Britain during the night, dropping bombs along the southeast coast. It was understood several casualties were caused, British pursuit planes chased the raider to sea.

Early this morning it was revealed that a train travelling between two south coast towns had been bombed by a German plane.

The engineer was injured, but only four passengers, two women and two children, were aboard the train. They escaped without injuries, crouching on the coach floor as the bombs fell. The toe of one woman's shoe was torn off and car windows were smashed as the bombs fell.

Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, was understood to have told the committee at its one-day hearing on the bill that both Britain and Germany have suffered serious naval losses during the present European conflict. Many submarines and small craft have been lost by the German fleet, Stark asserted.

The naval expansion bill would authorize an American navy equal in fighting power to the combined German, Japanese, French and Italian fleets. It would create a fleet of 740 warships when the program is completed.

However, that wouldn't cause many wrinkles if she's a student at Texas Tech—because the average young man spends only eighty cents on a date there; ten cents for bus tickets, 20 to 40 cents for show tickets, and 30 cents for refreshments.

and other countries overrun by Germany.

"Those interested think that the number should be at least 100,000," said Mrs. O'Day. "I made it 30,000 to test sentiment, and the number can be easily increased by an amendment to the bill."

Mrs. O'Day introduced her bill after conferences with Solicitor General Francis Biddle, who drafted the measure; Clarence Pickett of the Friends Organization; Katherine Lenroot, chief of the children's bureau of the Department of Labor, and representatives of the British and French embassies.

"It is necessary to suspend immigration quotas and revise the law which limits those coming to the country to 6,000 a month," explained Mrs. O'Day. "Whether congress will approve is questionable. Bills introduced last year to permit bringing of 20,000 refugee children here were rejected."

PAIR OF KASEY STARS WATCHED

KANSAS CITY, July 4—The New York Yankees plan to do a little building next year with Gerry Priddy and Phil Rizzuto, prize second base combination for the Kansas City Blues, in on the ground floor.

It took just one exhibition game, witnessed from the stands by Joe McCarthy and Yankee and Blue front office officials to drive that point home.

No matter that the powerful Yanks drubbed the cousins 7 to 4, the performance of Rizzuto at short and Priddy at second base convinced the strategists that they were witnessing the greatest infield combination in the game today. Their remarks were reiteration of statements by Tris Speaker and others who have witnessed the youngsters in play, to wit: The majors haven't seen anything like them for years.

Both players are adept at the plate, batting well above .300 out of their caving on the inner defense line is what brings the gleam to the eye of any baseball fan. The two have pulled their tricks around second base for the last four years and they work as one.

Their idea of an out is a double play and they work on the batter as if every ball smacked in their direction is a double play possibility. They led the American Association in double plays last season and are ahead of the pack in the same department this season.

Like true automatons of the game Priddy and Rizzuto waste no movement in looking or figuring at which spot the other will be; each knows the ground the other covers, and when Priddy pegs one down to Rizzuto, or vice versa, that man is ready to receive the ball.

According to advices from the front office, the shift in the Yankee lineup next spring will be Gordon to third with Rizzuto at short and Priddy on second. Another possibility, Gordon to first with Rolfe on the far corner sack has been broached. But whatever the shift, it seems certain at this writing that the present Blues second base combination will perform at their regular positions and that Crossett will be out.

It is a strange quirk of fate that has Rizzuto replacing Crossett. The present Yankee shortstop, is, and always has been, the idol of Phil Rizzuto.

Refusal To Believe Nazi Promises Speeds Move Against French Fleet

LONDON, July 4—Britain's navy struck swiftly to prevent a substantial portion of the French naval fleet from falling into German hands, the British Ministry of Information revealed today.

The British coup was hailed in London as a guarantee that the European naval balance of power would not swing over to Germany and Italy.

Describing the naval battle and seizures of French war vessels, the Ministry of Information announcement said:

"It will be recalled that the French Government, relying on the promises of Italy and Germany not to use her fleet against France's former ally, undertook by the terms of the armistice to allow their fleet to pass into the hands of the enemy."

holiday. It voted, in defiance of the leadership, to meet tomorrow, instead of Monday, to continue work on the national defense program.

The administration was inquiring what congress, and the country, would think about "taking in" 100,000 British "war orphans" for the duration of the European conflict.

Congress prepared to authorize the biggest navy in the history of the world for the United States.

The Navy Department planned construction of 25 additional warships and purchase of several thousand naval planes, after learning that President Roosevelt will send a message to congress Monday asking for $5,000,000,000 more for national defense. This will bring the defense rearmament program to a total of more than $15,000,000,000—appropriated or authorized.

That gives an idea of how it is today—compared to a year ago.

The agreement was reached shortly after midnight, at which hour 5,000 seagoing culinary workers were to have quit their posts, automatically throwing into idleness 20,000 workers and 175 inter-coastal and offshore vessels in the Pacific.

Lesnevich was tiring fast. Conn drove him to the ropes and peppered him with lefts and rights. But he couldn't smack Lesnevich to the canvas for the kill, although Gus went down once but not for a count.

A fighter with a killing punch, under circumstances as they were, would have had Lesnevich flat on his back in the land of whatever dreams a kayoed pugilist finds himself.

But Conn has a lot of time to develop himself. He's only 23 years old now. If, within the next two years, his punching skill becomes commensurate with his boxing trickery, he might well become the "White Hope" for which fans the countrywide have long been searching.

MAN ON DONKEY IS GUARD FOR ENGLISH ISLE

BECHOU, Channel Isles—Seated on a donkey, 70-year-old John Francis Perio daily patrols this small island to guard the twelve inhabitants against German invaders.

John has promoted himself to be the island's defense force. To add dignity to his position he has devised a uniform consisting of tattered kilt, sporran, tunic, forage cap, rifle and knee boots.

Throughout the day John patrols the shore of the island on Clarabelle, his fat, sedate donkey of uncertain age. Constantly he places his hand over his eyes and scans the skies.

"I'm not having German planes flying over here," he said as he gently patted his rifle. "Just let the Germans try. I'll fix them."

GERMANY "SPY" SHIPS
PHILADELPHIA — German ships which visited Philadelphia in the past were able to observe weaknesses of our coast defenses, according to former Mayor J. Hampton Moore of Philadelphia.

"This is a very good time to realize," said Moore, "that we are very inadequately defended along the Atlantic seaboard. The younger generation is unaware, I imagine, that American ships were sunk outside the Delaware River in the World War."

But Conn has a lot of time to develop himself. He's only 23 years old now. If, within the next two years, his punching skill becomes commensurate with his boxing trickery, he might well become the "White Hope" for which fans the countrywide have long been searching.

The musical production, which opens Sunday at the Cliftona Theatre is their first together since "Sweethearts," which was immediately followed by each making a concert tour across the country. "New Moon," in addition to its dramatic and exciting romance of a lady of French royalty and a fugitive from political justice, offers such all-time musical favorites as "Lover Come Back to Me," "One Kiss," "Wanting You," "Softly As in a Morning Sunrise," "Rondelet," "Largo," "Marianne," "Paree," "Shoe Shine Song" and the stirring "Stout Hearted Men."

The supporting cast includes Mary Boland, who recently scored a hit as the Countess de Lage in "The Women," George Zucco, Beecher.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

In a picture which is said to surpass even their greatest triumphs on the screen, Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy are teamed again, this time in the musical romance "New Moon" a story set against the colorful background of early New Orleans.

the afternoon and a lecture in the evening.

As a part of the School of Missions program, arranged for July 29 to August 3, Bishop Ralph
Ward of Chengtu, China, will deliver two addresses on Friday, August 2.

As a part of the closing day's program on August 5, Dr. Brand L. Stradley, dean of the college of arts, Ohio State University, will present the Sunday school lesson for the Adult Bible class.

The musical production, which opens Sunday at the Cliftona Theatre is their first together since "Sweethearts," which was immediately followed by each making a concert tour across the country.
"New Moon," in addition to its dramatic and exciting romance of a lady of French royalty and a fugitive from political justice, offers such all-time musical favorites as "Lover Come Back to Me," "One Kiss," "Wanting You,"
"Softly As in a Morning Sunrise,"
"Rondelet," "Largo," "Marianne,"
"Paree," "Shoe Shine Song" and the stirring "Stout Hearted Men."

The supporting cast includes Mary Boland, who recently scored a hit as the Countess de Lage in "The Women," George Zucco, Beecher.

H. B. Warner, Grant Mitchell and more than fifty speaking roles.
The Sigmund Romberg operetta was both produced and directed by Robert Z. Leonard, whose previous MacDonald - Eddy hits include
"Maytime" and "The Girl of the Golden West."

Words of Wisdom

There is no such thing as preaching patience into people unless the sermon is so long that they have to practice it while they hear. No man can learn patience except by going into the hurly-burly world, and taking life just as it blows. Patience is but lying to and riding out the gale.—H. W.

LIBERTY

WHAT is needed most right now, in every country on earth, is a Liberty Bell. And the best way to celebrate this Fourth of July would be not with the "bon-fires and illuminations" prescribed by Daniel Webster, nor the cannon crackers and dynamite often used in latter years, but church bells and dinner bells and door bells and any other kind of bells available. We might even dig up Edgar Allen Poe's famous poem about bells, and get the children to chanting and chiming it.

The idea, as the reader doubtless perceives, is to make such a loud and joyful noise unto the Lord on this blessed day of deliverance that it can be heard all the way from here to Berchtesgaden, and that on its way there it may rouse and cheer some of the nations now sinking under a load of tyranny. And that even in darkest Hitlerland it may penetrate the ears of enslaved souls that have been thanking their Fuehrer for "freeing them from liberty."

Our children should be made to understand, if any of them haven't thought of it themselves, that it's right and proper to raise merry hell on this day, provided they know what it's for, and provided reasonable precautions are taken against blowing their fingers off. Bells are the best, but drums, horns, dishpans and old wash boilers may serve the patriotic purpose.

WHY FRANCE FELL

SCHOLARS used to argue about "Why Ancient Rome fell." The argument finally seemed to end in the conclusion that Rome didn't really fall—it just gradually disappeared.

People will be arguing now for a long time on how France fell. Marshall Pe-tain says it was because the spirit of sacrifice had given away to the spirit of enjoyment. The Spartan virtues ended in luxury and softness. This explanation may be as sound as any. And it's a stern warning to us Americans to harden ourselves again.

France is acknowledged to have had a fine army, as good as any. What was wrong there? As an American writer sums it up: "What use is a great army if the industrial production on which that army depends is slack, and if the people behind the army are disunited, shot through with partisan politics, burdened with bureaucracy, dedicated to gabble, inconsistent on special favors and determined to work as little as possible for as much as possible?"

It might be a good thing for all of us Americans to read that statement over slowly, several times, and then spend a little extra time thinking about it.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Here we are, shooting fire-crackers in celebration of Independence Day and thinking it terrible if a youngster gets a powder burn. Anyone who has read headlines of the last ten months can draw his own contrasting picture. Everything is in our favor. Even those who object to the noise really have nothing much about which to complain.

Heard about one group of local citizens, members of a religious group, that in the South end advised children against saluting the American flag. Chatted with Bill Hamilton who last Sunday saw the Reds take a twin bill, the first time he has seen the Reds win a ball game in two years or more. And Bill is in frequent attendance at the Cincinnati park.

There goes Louis Martin, owner of the Circle theatre, who paid a $10 fine in city court because his show continued beyond last Saturday midnight. Seems that it is against the law to show motion pictures after that hour. Personally, I am of the opinion that scores of other law violators in the ville are more of a threat to public morals than a motion picture that has passed both national and state censors. For instance the numbers peddlers, the horse parlor operators, the gambling joint owners and the dumps that sell liquor to minors.

Rode into the country and saw much cutting of wheat, and the crop looks exceptionally good. Corn is shooting up like skyrockets. Pastures never looked better.

Noted great activity at all filling stations and garages as cars were readied for holiday travel. Seems as though no one plans on remaining home over the Fourth. Congratulated Bob Norris on that fine new Sohio station of his on South Court Street. Look it over the first evening you are out riding. That place really is lighted.

Fred Tipton told me of taking four fine bass out of Deer creek on a flatfish that he declares is the finest of plugs. Fred knows those waters and has promised to let me in on some of his secrets one of these days. After listening to the wild tales told by members of the Circleville Chub Fleet, following their return from the North woods, fishing around here seems tame. Saw a 30 pound muskie sent back to the ville by Pop Betz and Jay Clark. Jay is on his way home, but the Betz family is having such a grand time that members may remain North for the rest of this month.

That seven pound dog of ours decided to be tough for once and strayed up the alley. An hour later a boy brought her back with a bright lily fasted into her harness. Just a sissy after all.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

FOUR HEART-BREAKING "IFS"

WASHINGTON—For Senator Bob Taft and his desperately battling floor managers, the inside story of those last hours of balloting at the GOP convention is a tragedy of unrealized "ifs". There were four crucial moments when one of these "ifs" might have changed the outcome of the dramatic tug-of-war.

The first was during the 7 to 8:30 p. m. recess between the second and third ballots. Taft's managers frantically tried to get hold of Joe Pew, Pennsylvania boss, who privately had voiced determined opposition to Willkie. A swing of even part of the large Keystone delegation to Taft on the next ballot would have had tremendous psychological effect on the teetering convention.

This was the crucial interval when all the leaders were furiously engaged in behind-the-scenes parleys. But Pew was nowhere to be found. Finally a telephone call revealed that he was at home—taking a bath and having a bite to eat, with the servants under strict orders not to disturb him.

The second heart-breaker came during the third ballot, on which Taft made a gain of only nine as against 88 for Willkie. Senator Arthur Vandenberg telephoned the tense Taft headquarters and declared he was ready to do anything to help his Senate colleague. Taft leaders were jubilant, expecting the Michigan vote to come to them on the next count.

But when Michigan did bolt Vandenberg, it did so on the sixth ballot and went to Willkie, to give his roaring stampede the push it needed to send him over the top.

NOTE—Next day one Taft lieutenant remarked bitterly, regarding unfulfilled senatorial promises of support, "They were like Chamberlain, too late and too little." Among the Senators who had promised to deliver but didn't were John Thomas of Idaho and John Townsend of Delaware.

CANDIDATE HOOVER

Herbert Hoover was the third disappointment for the Taftites. He too had expressed opposition to Willkie and preference for Taft. But when the Ohioan went to him and asked for his backing, Hoover replied, in effect, "I will if I can't get anywhere myself."

Surrounded by a group of intimates, the ex-President believed that the convention would deadlock and give him an excellent chance to emerge as a dark horse. Taft managers tried to convince him the convention would not deadlock, and that if he was going to exert his influence it must come in the early balloting.

Hoover refused to budge, claiming a bloc of 24 certain votes in the California delegation. The Taft men denied this, offering to poll the delegates to prove they were for Taft. But Hoover stuck to his ambition—and another "if" went up the flue for Taft.

Hitler would deplore these national party conventions. Think of wasting so much noise on democracy! As for us, we're just low enough to like 'em.

The country has waked up, all right, but has its intelligence really begun to hit on all cylinders yet?

LAFF-A-DAY

"It's one of your patients. She wants to know what to do. She can't get her baby to sleep."

DIET AND HEALTH

Ready for Trouble

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

● FIREWORKS and explosives are not the only hazards of the day we celebrate. I find in my files a newspaper clipping with the date line Wednesday morning, July 5, 1939, with the headline—"Holiday's Toll of Deaths Exceeds 550 in Nation."

The automobile accounted for the largest number of these fatalities, 251. Drowning was the cause of death in 167 instances, 28 train accidents, 30 shootings and 8 airplane accidents added their share.

As we look over this list, it seems very impersonal to us. It didn't happen to our family. We are all careful drivers, bathers, etc. Let us resolve to go on that way. Because most of these fatalities are individual responsibilities and depend for their prevention 95 per cent on common sense.

First Aid Day

There isn't very much more for the hygienist to do about it than point out that self-evident conclusion.

But the Fourth is certainly a good day to put in a little lesson on first aid.

Resuscitation has a technique that should be learned by all vacationists. In cases of drowning, electric shock, or unconsciousness from fumes—such as automobile exhaust—any condition which results in suspension of breathing, artificial respiration should be started as soon as possible, which means as soon as the victim is clear of the causative agent, whether it be a gas-filled room, water, or the electric wire.

Keep Victim Covered

The best way to give artificial respiration is the prone pressure method, but any method will be helpful.

The Silvester method of putting the patient on his back and alternately raising his arms over the head and pressing them against the chest wall will do if in your excitement you can't remember any other way. Its advantage is its simplicity: its disadvantage that the tongue may fall back in the mouth and keep air from going in.

The prone pressure method is to put the patient face down, with the forehead resting on one of his forearms, then straddle him facing the back of his head, and alternately lean forward with one flat hand on each side of the chest and press and then lean back and release pressure.

All these victims are in shock and blankets or coats or any kind of clothing should be put over and under them, even on a hot summer day.

Never, never leave them or let them be taken to a hospital until natural breathing has started.

Do not try to lift crash victims after they have been pulled clear of the wreckage, until the ambulance comes. If they are breathing cover them up and keep them warm, and let them alone. Unskilled lifting has resulted in many broken necks and hips.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

E. F.—"We have had quite a discussion as to whether you should or should not open your windows at night. This would particularly pertain to children and if you have a cold. Do open windows cause you to catch cold?"

Answer—I think, undoubtedly, that opening the windows at night, provided your bed clothes keep you warm, is generally regarded as more healthy than keeping them closed. Most people find they wake up more comfortable in the morning. It induces sleep and there is an impression that it prevents colds. This applies even more to children than it does to adults. In fact, elderly and weak people probably can overdo the window raising idea. Statistics show that in the case of pneumonia people do better in the open air.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clending has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clending, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Looking Back in Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO

Mrs. T. P. Brown and Mrs. J. Wallace Crist were hostesses at an evening bridge party, entertaining 30 guests at the New American Hotel Coffee Shop.

Pickaway County wheat and corn farmers were trying to estimate the damage done their crops when the heaviest rain storm in many months struck the county. Dr. H. R. Clarke, weather man, reported that from 4 p. m. Wednesday until 11 a. m. Thursday exactly five inches of rain fell, according to his weather gauge.

Miss Margaret Rooney, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Rooney, was employed as a teacher in the Circleville system succeeding Miss Mary Seall who resigned to join the high school faculty of the Monroe Township School.

STORY

THE CHARACTERS:
LINDA AVERY, receptionist at a New York models' agency, starts to rebuild her romance with RONALD STAFFORD, her childhood sweetheart, who has "twining his way to fame on a trumpet," but
SARAH MARKLEY, wealthy glamor girl, is trying to capture Ronald for herself. Meanwhile

CHAPTER SIX

RONALD'S voice sounded low and distinct in the sudden silence which followed Caroline Pickard's quiet fall into unconsciousness.

"Announce our engagement, Sally? But there isn't such a thing!" His tones were amazed and amused and disbelieving.

"It's Leap Year—woman's grand opportunity . . ."

Whatever else Sarah said was lost in the ensuing confusion. But one thing was certain. Sarah was determined to show her, Linda, that she could have what she wanted. Her throat had been hot, tight. Now it relaxed. Sarah Markley was making a stupid little monkey out of her beautiful self.

But when Caroline had been revived in the dressing room, and was resting on a great velvet divan, and Linda left her for a moment to report to Terry that she was going to be all right, Robert stopped her.

"Sarah Markley wants us to go on with a group of people. I told her we couldn't. Do you mind?"

"I wouldn't have gone," she answered. "Caroline's better. Couldn't we all get out of here soon?"

"Instantly! Terry's having jitters. I'll tell him to have his car brought around."

But before the group got away Ronald found her. He was leaving, he said, and he wanted her to meet him for tea after hours the next day. His face was worried and his eyes were narrowed. Something had happened, something displeasing to him, Linda noted. She wanted to say something comforting, but there were too many people around. After all, what could she say? She wasn't supposed to have heard that remark of Sarah's.

Firmly she closed a door in her mind, a door marked Ronnie. But at the way down the avenue in Terry's car his face insisted on floating in front of her. Not all ways his grown-up face. Once it was his face as he looked as a disappointed little boy when another youngster received a solo part in the school band, although Ronnie had been promised the role. And again it was his face the day he learned that his father was dead and his father's business was dead the old, honorable institution which even his father believed it was, because an unscrupulous partner had ruined its name.

And now when he was making the musical grade, Sarah was annoying him.

Because she was so lost in her own thoughts she did not notice until someone whistled that Terry had stopped his car in front of a shabby old house.

"That object by the steps looks to me all the world like a trunk," Terry was saying. "And two suitcases and a book shelf. Who would be moving out at this hour?"

"More likely somebody being put out," Caroline said in a matter-of-fact voice. "I'll slip out and thank you for being so nice, all of you, when I did my act."

"Get her address," Linda urged Robert in a low voice, remembering the girl was hungry even now, and nobody else seemed to know it. "Or wait, I'll go up with her."

Terry was helping Caroline out

and Linda followed. Robert had stepped out quickly to open the door and he waited for the others. Caroline reached in her pocketbook, a small black envelope, that wasn't quite an evening bag, for her key.

She didn't need it, though. The door opened and a frowsy-headed woman in a pair of faded red pajamas faced them.

"So! You think you can come at this hour all dressed up and with your fine friends and still owe me rent, do you?" the woman jeered. "Well, you can't, Miss High Stepping Vanderbilt. You can't! I got a tenant for your room tonight, paid me a month ahead, and he's up there asleep now. That's your stuff by the steps!"

She closed the door sharply, then opened it a crack to call, "I'm holding your wrist watch till I get that six dollars you owe me."

Linda felt ill. She was vividly aware of the embarrassment of the other girl. To have your clothes put out on the street! To have fainting because you were hungry! To have the man you loved witness your humiliation!

Terry was turning Caroline around, meeting her eyes, holding them, and his face knew no laughter now, only a deep seriousness and sympathy.

"You never told me," he said.

"Caroline, darling, you never told me!" He repeated it as though he couldn't quite believe that she had kept this secret.

"What was there to tell?" She tried to laugh. "Now you all know the worst. When there aren't any jobs things like this happen."

Her lips laughed, but her eyes were dark with despair.

But Terry didn't smile. He was ringing the doorbell with one hand, and his other arm was holding Caroline. He didn't release the pressure on the bell until the landlady appeared again. Then he handed her some bills and demanded the return of the wrist watch. He told the woman curtly, in a few well-

WHAT is needed most right now, in every country on earth, is a Liberty Bell. And the best way to celebrate this Fourth of July would be not with the "bon-fires and illuminations" prescribed by Daniel Webster, nor the cannon crackers and dynamite often used in latter years, but church bells and dinner bells and door bells and any other kind of bells available. We might even dig up Edgar Allen Poe's famous poem about bells, and get the children to chanting and chiming it.

The idea, as the reader doubtless perceives, is to make such a loud and joyful noise unto the Lord on this blessed day of deliverance that it can be heard all the way from here to Berchtesgaden, and that on its way there it may rouse and cheer some of the nations now sinking under a load of tyranny. And that even in darkest Hitlerland it may penetrate the ears of enslaved souls that have been thanking their Fuehrer for "freeing them from liberty."

Our children should be made to understand, if any of them haven't thought of it themselves, that it's right and proper to raise merry hell on this day, provided they know what it's for, and provided reasonable precautions are taken against blowing their fingers off. Bells are the best, but drums, horns, dishpans and old wash boilers may serve the patriotic purpose.

WHY FRANCE FELL

SCHOLARS used to argue about "Why Ancient Rome fell." The argument finally seemed to end in the conclusion that Rome didn't really fall—it just gradually disappeared.

People will be arguing now for a long time on how France fell. Marshall Pétain says it was because the spirit of sacrifice had given away to the spirit of enjoyment. The Spartan virtues ended in luxury and softness. This explanation may be as sound as any. And it's a stern warning to us Americans to harden ourselves again.

France is acknowledged to have had a fine army, as good as any. What was wrong there? As an American writer sums it up: "What use is a great army if the industrial production on which that army depends is slack, and if the people behind the army are disunited, shot through with partisan politics, burdened with bureaucracy, dedicated to gabble, insistent on special favors and determined to work as little as possible for as much as possible?"

It might be a good thing for all of us Americans to read that statement over slowly, several times, and then spend a little extra time thinking about it.

Here we are, shooting fire-crackers in celebration of Independence Day and thinking it terrible if a youngster gets a powder burn. Anyone who has read headlines of the last ten months can draw his own contrasting picture. Everything is in our favor. Even those who object to the noise really have nothing much about which to complain.

Heard about one group of local citizens, members of a religious group, that in the South end advised children against saluting the American flag. Chatted with Bill Hamilton who last Sunday saw the Reds take a twin bill, the first time he has seen the Reds win a ball game in two years or more. And Bill is in frequent attendance at the Cincinnati park.

There goes Louis Martin, owner of the Circle theatre, who paid a $10 fine in city court because his show continued beyond last Saturday midnight. Seems that it is against the law to show motion pictures after that hour. Personally, I am of the opinion that scores of other law violators in the ville are more of a threat to public morals than a motion picture that has passed both national and state censors. For instance the numbers peddlers, the horse parlor operators, the gambling joint owners and the dumps that sell liquor to minors.

Rode into the country and saw much cutting of wheat, and the crop looks exceptionally good. Corn is shooting up like skyrockets. Pastures never looked better.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

FOUR HEART-BREAKING "IFS"

WASHINGTON—For Senator Bob Taft and his desperately battling floor managers, the inside story of those last hours of balloting at the GOP convention is a tragedy of unrealized "ifs." There were four crucial moments when one of these "ifs" might have changed the outcome of the dramatic tug-of-war.

The first was during the 7 to 8:30 p. m. recess between the second and third ballots. Taft's managers frantically tried to get hold of Joe Pew, Pennsylvania boss, who privately had voiced determined opposition to Willkie. A swing of even part of the large Keystone delegation to Taft on the next ballot would have had tremendous psychological effect on the teetering convention.

This was the crucial interval when all the leaders were furiously engaged in behind-the-scenes parleys. But Pew was nowhere to be found. Finally a telephone call revealed that he was at home—taking a bath and having a bite to eat, with the servants under strict orders not to disturb him.

The second heart-breaker came during the third ballot, on which Taft made a gain of only nine as against 88 for Willkie. Senator Arthur Vandenberg telephoned the tense Taft headquarters and declared he was ready to do anything to help his Senate colleague. Taft leaders were jubilant, expecting the Michigan vote to come to them on the next count.

But when Michigan did bolt Vandenberg, it did so on the sixth ballot and went to Willkie, to give his roaring stampede the push it needed to send him over the top.

NOTE—Next day one Taft lieutenant remarked bitterly, regarding unfulfilled senatorial promises of support, "They were like Chamberlain, too late and too little." Among the Senators who had promised to deliver but didn't were John Thomas of Idaho and John Townsend of Delaware.

CANDIDATE HOOVER

Herbert Hoover was the third disappointment for the Taftites. He too had expressed opposition to Willkie and preference for Taft. But when the Ohioan went to him and asked for his backing, Hoover replied, in effect, "I will if I can't get anywhere myself."

Surrounded by a group of intimates, the ex-President believed that the convention would deadlock and give him an excellent chance to emerge as a dark horse. Taft managers tried to convince him the convention would not deadlock, and that if he was going to exert his influence it must come in the early balloting.

Hoover refused to budge, claiming a bloc of 24 certain votes in the California delegation. The Taft men denied this, offering to poll the delegates to prove they were for Taft. But Hoover stuck to his ambition—and another "if" went up the flue for Taft.

Hitler would deplore these national party conventions. Think of wasting so much noise on democracy! As for us, we're just low enough to like 'em.

The country has waked up, all right, but has its intelligence really begun to hit on all cylinders yet?

DIET AND HEALTH

Ready for Trouble

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

● FIREWORKS and explosives are not the only hazards of the day we celebrate. I find in my files a newspaper clipping with the date line Wednesday morning, July 5, 1939, with the headline—"Holiday's Toll of Deaths Exceeds 550 in Nation."

The automobile accounted for the largest number of these fatalities, 251. Drowning was the cause of death in 167 instances, 28 train accidents, 30 shootings and 8 airplane accidents added their share.

As we look over this list, it seems very impersonal to us. It didn't happen to our family. We are all careful drivers, bathers, etc. Let us resolve to go on that way. Because most of these fatalities are individual responsibilities and depend for their prevention 95 per cent on common sense.

First Aid Day

There isn't very much more for the hygienist to do about it than point out that self-evident conclusion.

But the Fourth is certainly a good day to put in a little lesson on first aid.

Resuscitation has a technique that should be learned by all vacationists. In cases of drowning, electric shock, or unconsciousness from fumes—such as automobile exhaust—any condition which results in suspension of breathing, artificial respiration should be started as soon as possible, which means as soon as the victim is clear of the causative agent, whether it be a gas-filled room, water, or the electric wire.

Keep Victim Covered

The best way to give artificial respiration is the prone pressure method, but any method will be helpful.

The Silvester method of putting the patient on his back and alternately raising his arms over the head and pressing them against the chest wall will do if in your excitement you can't remember any other way. Its advantage is its simplicity: its disadvantage that the tongue may fall back in the mouth and keep air from going in.

The prone pressure method is to put the patient face down, with the forehead resting on one of his forearms, then hestride him facing the back of his head, and alternately lean forward with one flat hand on each side of the chest and press and then lean back and release pressure.

All these victims are in shock and blankets or coats or any kind of clothing should be put over and under them, even on a hot summer day.

Never, never leave them or let them be taken to a hospital until natural breathing has started.

Do not try to lift crash victims after they have been pulled clear of the wreckage, until the ambulance comes. If they are breathing cover them up and keep them warm, and let them alone. Unskilled lifting has resulted in many broken necks and hips.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

E. F.—"We have had quite a discussion as to whether you should or should not open your windows at night. This would particularly pertain to children and if you have a cold. Do open windows cause you to catch cold?"

Answer—I think, undoubtedly, that opening the windows at night, provided your bed clothes keep you warm, is generally regarded as more healthy than keeping them closed. Most people find they wake up more comfortable in the morning. It induces sleep and there is an impression that it prevents colds. This applies even more to children than it does to adults. In fact, elderly and weak people probably can overdo the window raising idea. Statistics show that in the case of pneumonia people do better in the open air.

STORY

THE CHARACTERS:
LINDA AVERY, receptionist at a New York models' agency, starts to rebuild her romance with RONALD STAFFORD, her childhood sweetheart, who has "owing his way to fame on a trumpet," but

CHAPTER SIX

RONALD'S voice sounded low and distinct in the sudden silence which followed Caroline Pickard's quiet fall into unconsciousness.

"Announce our engagement, Sally? But there isn't such a thing!" His tones were amazed and amused and disbelieving.

"It's Leap Year—woman's grand opportunity . . ."

Whatever else Sarah said was lost in the ensuing confusion. But one thing was certain. Sarah was determined to show her, Linda, that she could have what she wanted. Her throat had been hot, tight. Now it relaxed. Sarah Markley was making a stupid little monkey out of her beautiful self.

But when Caroline had been revived in the dressing room, and was resting on a great velvet divan, and Linda left her for a moment to report to Terry that she was going to be all right, Robert stopped her. "Sarah Markley wants us to go on with a group of people. I told her we couldn't. Do you mind?"

"I wouldn't have gone," she answered. "Caroline's better. Couldn't we all get out of here soon?"

"Instantly! Terry's having jitters. I'll tell him to have his car brought around."

But before the group got away Ronald found her. He was leaving, he said, and he wanted her to meet him for tea after hours the next day. His face was worried and his eyes were narrowed. Something had happened, something displeasing to him, Linda noted. She wanted to say something comforting, but there were too many people around. After all, what could she say? She wasn't supposed to have heard that remark of Sarah's.

Firmly she closed a door in her mind, a door marked Ronnie. But all the way down the avenue in Terry's car his face insisted on floating in front of her. Not always his grown-up face. Once it was his face as he looked as a disappointed little boy when another youngster received a solo part in the school band, although Ronnie had been promised the role. And again it was his face the day he learned that his father was dead and his father's business was not the old, honorable institution which even his father believed it was, because an unscrupulous partner had ruined its name.

And now when he was making the musical grade, Sarah was annoying him. Because she was so lost in her own thoughts she did not notice until someone whistled that Terry had stopped his car in front of a shabby old house.

"That object by the steps looks to me all the world like a trunk," Terry was saying. "And two suitcases and a book shelf. Who would be moving out at this hour?"

"More likely somebody being put out," Caroline said in a matter-of-fact voice. "I'll slip out and thank you for being so nice, all of you, when I did my act."

"Get her address," Linda urged Robert in a low voice, remembering the girl was hungry even now, and nobody else seemed to know it. "Or wait, I'll go up with her."

Terry was helping Caroline out

and Linda followed. Robert had stepped out quickly to open the door and he waited for the others. Caroline reached in her pocketbook, a small black envelope, that wasn't quite an evening bag, for her key.

She didn't need it, though. The door opened and a frowsy-headed woman in a pair of faded red pajamas faced them.

"So! You think you can come at this hour all dressed up and with your fine friends and still owe me rent, do you?" the woman jeered. "Well, you can't, Miss High Stepping Vanderbilt. You can't! I got a tenant for your room tonight, paid me a month ahead, and he's up there asleep now. That's your stuff by the steps!"

She closed the door sharply, then opened it a crack to call, "I'm holding your wrist watch till I get that six dollars you owe me."

Linda felt ill. She was vividly aware of the embarrassment of the other girl. To have your clothes put out on the street! To have faint because you were hungry! To have the man you loved witness your humiliation!

Terry was turning Caroline around, meeting her eyes, holding them, and his face knew no laughter now, only a deep seriousness and sympathy.

"You never told me," she said. "Caroline, darling, you never told me!" He repeated it as though he couldn't quite believe that she had kept this secret.

"What was there to tell?" She tried to laugh. "Now you all know the worst. When there aren't any jobs things like this happen."

Her lips laughed, but her eyes were dark with despair.

But Terry didn't smile. He was ringing the doorknob with one hand, and his other arm was holding Caroline. He didn't release the pressure on the bell until the landlady appeared again. Then he handed her some bills and demanded the return of the wrist watch. He told the woman curtly, in a few well-chosen words, what he thought of her.

Linda slipped back to the curb. Robert had drawn near, ready to assist, but realizing that this scene was something in which he was an intruder, had said nothing. Now he looked at Linda with questioning eyes, asking her what he should do. His mouth was stern, and Linda knew that he was quietly upbraiding Terry for having known so little about the other girl's troubles. Still, how well did he know her? How long had he known her? And even if the friendship were old and lasting, pride was a silver armor behind which a woman could hide many things.

Low, but firm and insistent, Terry's voice reached the two at the curb.

"There'll be no more of this foolishness, Caroline. We're going to be married now, tonight! Then I can take care of you. Oh, Carol, you sweet boob, why didn't you tell me about things?"

The girl's voice was sweet, tired, trying to be gay. "Darling, do you think I'd always want to remember my husband married me because I'd have had to sit on my trunk on the sidewalk if he hadn't? Ask me again some time, when I'm on top of things . . ."

Terry pleaded, argued, insisted. "No," Caroline said again and again.

Finally the man turned to Linda and Robert. "When you love a girl who won't even tell you when she's up against it, and you have held the idea she loved you, too, and are properly engaged to her, isn't it all right to rush the wedding?"

Suppose this man were Ronnie. Suppose she were Caroline, Linda was thinking. She would want to lean on his strength. But she couldn't. Not until her banners were flying again.

"No, it isn't a night for a wedding," she said so quickly that the men gazed at her in amazement. "I have another plan!"

If you would have spring onions next year weeks earlier than most home gardens produce them, get ready now to plant some of the variety known as Egyptian onion, or perennial tree onion. Baer To Get Chance To Erase Blot On Career

By Lawton Carver

NEW YORK, July 4—That natural born ham clown and accidental pugilist, Max Baer, is going to get a chance to erase the biggest black mark on his mottled record, if the people demand it. Putting it another way, Baer is going to be billed for an encore with Joe Louis at Chicago in September, unless the reaction to tentative plans for the match is such as to make it inadvisable for the former heavyweight champion to go in there again with the current title-holder, who beat down Baer's half-hearted resistance in four rounds when they met in 1935.

"We don't want the fight unless there is some money in it," Ancil Hoffman, Baer's head keeper, said quite frankly today. "But if it will draw, we'll take it. We want to see how you newspaper fellows feel about it before we do anything definite—not that you can't be wrong. You certainly weren't such good experts on Maxie's fight with Tony Galento. (Chuckie, chuckle from Mr. Hoffman). Anyway, I'm going to talk to Mike Jacobs some more before I leave here and I'm going to stop off in Chicago to talk to Joe Triner, head of the Illinois Boxing Commission, some more next week."

O. K., Mr. Hoffman. I'm not in the match-making business, but you asked for it from the newspaper fellows, and here it is:

I think Max Baer is one of the extremely few nice guys in the fight racket, possibly the most enjoyable one to be around and one of the two who give the spectators a thrill even by just being in one of the corners waiting for the opening bell. The other thriller-diller is Louis himself. Having established that this is all strictly impersonal, I'd like to suggest that you forget about the Louis match.

Despite the fact that Baer scored an eight-round technical knockout over Galento, and really gave Galento a terrific shellacking, Baer isn't the fighter he was and won't ever be again. He doesn't hit as hard and that's about all he ever had—that punch. It may be that Baer's hand was broken and coked up for his last fight with Louis, but that only proves that you and Baer both need keepers, Mr. Head Keeper. One of the things that just simply isn't being done is to send a one-handed fighter in against Louis.

But bad hand or otherwise, Baer feared Louis and by his own admission Baer has no intention of letting himself get banged around and cut up too much. Not at this stage of the game when he has all the money he needs and a family which he quite sincerely adores and vice versa.

Dodgers Thump Giants By Scoring Six Times In Final Inning

FELLER SCORES ANOTHER

Several Clubs Provide Big Show Of Fireworks Ere Holiday Arrives

By Pat Robinson

NEW YORK, July 4—The majors didn't wait for Independence Day doubleheaders to set off a brilliant display of pyrotechnics. They did that yesterday when three of the clubs—the Bees, the Red Sox and the Dodgers—each scored six runs in the ninth to win their games; and a fourth club—the White Sox—went them one better by scoring seven times in the ninth to clinch victory.

It has been years since the majors saw a day equal that for be-lated scoring. The Dodgers seemed doomed as they went into the ninth inning trailing 3 to 1, but Joe Medwick opened the inning with a homer and Peeewe Reese, the rookie shortstop, climaxed the inning with a game-winning homer with the bases loaded, the final score reading: Dodgers 7, Giants 3.

The victory increased the Dodgers' lead over the idle Reds and added a full game to their margin over the Giants. Joe Sullivan and Kirby Higbee were hooked up in a neat pitching duel until the final inning rolled around when the Bees fell on the luckless Philly ace for six big juicy markers.

And the Cubs also staged a be-lated rally to beat the Pirates, 7 to 5. The Cubs were trailing 5-4 going into the eighth when they drove over three runs to win.

Over in the other circuit, the Yanks and Senators were rained out, but there was action everywhere else. Bob Feller held the Browns to seven hits for his 12th victory, the Indians winning 5 to 2. The Indians moved back into first place as the White Sox put over their seven big runs in the ninth for a 12-7 decision over the Tigers. Wright and Kennedy both hit for the circuit during the up-r

Water Main Extension In Northend Is Near

Council Okels Ordinance To Establish Grades On Several Streets

OTHER BUSINESS VOTED

Sewage Disposal Costs To Industrial Plants To Be Determined

Extension of water mains into the Park Street area of the city was seen Thursday following passage of an ordinance by City Council Wednesday night establishing the grade of Park Street, Atwater Avenue, Reber Avenue, Hayward Street and Scioto Street south of Hayward.

Solicitor Joe Adkins told councilmen that he had talked with Ohio Water Service Company officials and that they had assured him the mains would be installed as soon as the grades were established and properly spaced fire hydrants were authorized by Council. He pointed out that an ordinance previously passed by Council had considered the spacing of fire hydrants, and that he saw no reason why the mains could not be installed immediately.

Action to establish mains in the area was taken following requests for water service by persons building dwellings along Atwater and Reber Avenues.

Barber Shop Closing Ordinance Delayed

Passage of the barber shop ordinance, establishing opening and closing hours for Circleville barber shops and requiring that all barbers be licensed, met with additional delay when Council voted to refer it to the ordinance committee to be shortened. By shortening the ordinance, expense of printing may be reduced, councilmen maintained.

Industrial Chiefs To Visit Council

To draw up an ordinance fixing permanent sewage disposal assessment rates for four Circleville industries, councilmen voted to meet as a committee of the whole with representatives of the industries next Wednesday night.

The four industries are the Contaner Corporation, the Winorr Canning Company, the Esmeralda

Canning Company and the Pickaway Dairy Company.

A temporary four-month ordinance regarding rates, passed by Council July 19, 1939, expired last fall and since that time no ordinance had been in effect. Temporary rates were set under the old ordinance so that adequate data could be collected to determine permanent fair and equitable charges.

Repairs At Jewell Home Cost $54.96

Service Director Leonard Morgan told councilmen that he had made the necessary repairs to the cellar wall at the Charles Jewell residence on Route 3, Circleville, at a cost of $54.96. The repairs were made after Jewell had told councilmen at a previous meeting that a city sewer, constructed too close to his dwelling, had overflowed and washed out the foundation under his house. Service Director Morgan said the cellar wall had been reinforced with concrete.

Collector For Sewage Plant Funds Okehed

The appointment of Miss Charlotte McEwing by City Auditor Lillian Young as Collector of Sewage Disposal Funds was approved by council, and her bond fixed at $1,000. The term of office of the collector coincides with that of the city auditor. The salary is $15 a week, not to exceed eight weeks in any one quarter and is paid out of the sewage rental and sewage disposal plant funds.

City To Purchase Tar To Repair Its Streets

In conjunction with the city service department's program of street repair, Councilmen passed an ordinance authorizing and directing Service Director Morgan to advertise for bids for furnishing the city with M. T. tar to be used for resurfacing city streets. The ordinance calls for from 1,000 to 30,000 gallons of tar, but Service Director Morgan told the Council this amount was set in order that he might get lower bids, and did not mean such an amount was needed at the present.

Four Ordinances Transfer Funds

Four ordinances were passed by Council amending the annual appropriation ordinance to include additional items.

An additional appropriation of $52.90 was made to the service department to pay for repairs to a transit. Another ordinance passed transferred $1,000, $500 from the auto license street repair fund and $500 from the gasoline tax fund, to the service department for the purchase of tools and equipment and $1,000 from the auto license street repair fund and the gasoline tax fund to the service department materials fund.

Berger Hospital will receive an additional $300 for the purchase of supplies other than medical.

Ralph Roby's appointment as janitor of Memorial Hall, effective for one year beginning July 1, 1940, was approved by Council. The appointment was made by the Board of Trustees of Memorial Hall.

On recommendations of the safety committee Council voted to move the traffic light, now at Mound and Scioto Streets to Pickaway and Main Streets.

SIZE OF BOTTLES AND BEER CAN TO BE FIXED

COLUMBUS, July 4—The size of beer bottles and cans may not be of great importance to most persons, but the state liquor board evinced an interest today when it called a public hearing for July 10 to determine whether the size of containers should be regulated by the state. There is no such regulation at present.

THREE INDICTED AFTER FRAUD IN STAMP SALE

COLUMBUS, July 4 — Three men were under indictment today on charges of conspiracy to defraud the state in connection with an alleged plot to redeem sales tax stamps a second time.

The Franklin County grand jury returned the joint true bill against Clarence L. Waterman, suspended examiner in the state auditor's office; Walter Bowers, former deputy in the probate court, and Russell Brown. All were members of the Independent, Inc., an organization formed in 1931 to fight chain store practices, according to assistant Attorney General Cray Davis.

The indictment charged that Waterman, whose duty it was to check returned stamps for re-

MUSIC HALL CHANGE

The Music Hall has been running into considerable opposition during the last two weeks in trying to impress on radio audiences the fact that the show starts an hour earlier beginning Thursday night. Bing Crosby made the announcement week before last, but the Louis-Godoy fight was on the air. Last Thursday night most of the show was built around the time change—Ken Carpenter had a few poems written for the occasion and all the guests were primed to talk about it in their turn at the microphone. At the last minute, however, the Republican convention became more lively and the networks continued the GOP ballots instead of the originally scheduled ballads.

HONOR FOR SWING

It was a personal pleasure as well as an honor when Raymond Gram Swing, news analyst recently went to Michigan to receive a Doctorate of Law degree at Olivet College from Dr. Joseph Brewer, president. The commentator, heard over the Mutual Broadcasting System on Mondays and Fridays at 9 p. m. and Dr. Brewer first met in London 17 years ago when Mr. Swing was foreign correspondent for the Chicago Daily News and the educator was fresh out of Oxford and private secretary to the publisher of the Spectator, important British Conservative periodical.

RADIO BRIEFS

New symphony in a minor key, based on the horrors of modern warfare, was completed this week by Evelyn, concertmistress of the "Hour of Charm," and will be introduced by one of the major symphonic orchestras at an open air concert soon.

Two interested sponsors visited the Pierre in New York this week to hear Bob Knight and his "Music

The Smarties, Boston quartet, have joined Horace Heidt's "Pot o' Gold" troupe.
